New corded headset joins VXI's BlueParrott family of cell phone headsets for loud environments.

Rollinsford, NH – October 10, 2007 – VXI Corporation has introduced the new BlueParrott CP110 corded headset to their family of cellular phone headsets for loud environments. Like the BlueParrott Roadwarrior B150 Bluetooth wireless headset, this new, corded headset is specifically designed to handle the challenges faced by people who use their cell phones in loud environments. With an emphasis on meeting the needs of truck drivers, the headset includes a noise-canceling microphone, which effectively blocks road and engine noise. Over the head styling promotes longwearing comfort and stability while professional grade durability withstands life on the road. The in-line controls allow the user to mute the microphone, adjust the volume and answer/end the calls. Superior speaker volume enables trucker drivers to hear their callers better in noisy places.

“The key feature is unsurpassed noise canceling performance, which provides land-line quality sound from cell phone calls. Now drivers can easily be heard over the engine when fueling and callers won't be irritated by all the distracting background noises. Combine that with the added functionality of inline controls and this headset surpasses anything on the market,” said Lisa Keslar, Director of Marketing, VXI Corporation. The Roadwarrior CP110 headset is offered at a highly competitive suggested retail price of $69.99 and is backed by a one-year warranty.
